

Re: IAC

by IAC, 01-Apr-16 09:17 PM GMT

It has been quite some time since I attempted to update this diary. Bit of a losing battle really. There comes a time when you find that updating blogs, Facebook and Twitter pages can become a full time job.

The month of March has been very kind to me after yet another miserable winter. The Comma are the main pull for me to get out and about again. They very seldom let me down. Can there be anything better than the Comma in March...well....perhaps an Orange Tip in March...but that did not happen this year. I have recently acquired a new camera, the Canon 750D. So I have been very keen, keener than usual to test it to the max at every opportunity. I am still using the Sigma 105mm with the new Canon....and I have to say, I dont believe the Canon 750D likes this lens at all. Some very strange behavior, camera locks up from time to time and pushes out some very weird light metering. I have been struggling to get it to do what I want it to do...One thing I can say about the Canon 750D auto focus, is that it is incredibly quick and accurate, light years ahead of the 600D I previously owned. Here are some examples...

Iain.

Re: IAC

by trevor, 01-Apr-16 11:20 PM GMT

I'd say your getting on pretty well with your new camera. Like to see more !

Trevor.

Re: IAC

by IAC, 03-Apr-16 10:55 AM GMT

Thank you Trevor, I will try my best to find some time to keep posting on here. Here are a few more Comma, Small Tort and Peacock as well as a Gorse Shield with the new 750D and a few various from 2015 with the old 600D.

